ARCHAEOLOGY PROGRAMS

IN IRELAND

Award winning excavations embedded in the local community

Learn archaeological skills with in-country experts whilst immersing yourself in the unique heritage of Ireland

Who are we?

The Irish Archaeology Field School (IAFS) is Ireland's leading provider of site-based archaeological research and training programs. Since 2005 we have been undertaking archaeology digs in locations around Ireland. These include excavations of the buried ruins of the first Anglo-Norman fortification built in Ireland following the invasion in 1169, at Ferrycarrig, Co. Wexford, in the southeast of Ireland. The dig is the cornerstone of the Digging the Lost Town of Carrig Project, working closely with the local community and the Irish National Heritage Park, to incorporate this hugely important archaeological site into the story of Ireland's history.

What do we do?

Our programs are built on an inclusive, partnership approach and aim to serve the needs of the community and faculty partners. We will organise all aspects of your program, including:

- Faculty partnered by a dedicated academic leaders
- Pre-departure advising and application assistance
- Airport transfers
- Welcome/project packs
- Homestay accommodation and all meals
- Field trips, workshops and lectures
- In-country orientation and welcome event
- 24/7 in-country support team

Signing up for the IAFS program this summer was the best decision I could've made. I made lifelong friends from all over the world and learned so much! The staff are absolutely the best and are able to accommodate you based on your level of experience. I would do this again in a heartbeat. Do yourself and your career a favor and don't hesitate, sign up now!

Attending the dig with IAFS this summer was one of the best things I've ever done. The instructors were knowledgeable about the area's history and went out of their way to help the students. I absolutely loved every minute of it and I'm so glad that I was able to participate in a field school that made me a better person, student, and future archaeologist.
